FROM CAIRO TO PARIS EASY FOR 'KISSING GIRLS' AT COLUMBIA THEATRE.

Sam Howe and his Kissing Girls played to a capacity house at the Columbia Theatre last night. He is more successful as Iky Umsky, his new character, than as the Jewish giazier, in which character he set a record that seemed impossible to beat. The piece this season is a two-act buriesque, with the first scene laid in Egypt, with Ike Umsky, a newly wed capitalist, who has never kissed his wife, Margaret Flavin, who doesn't like Iky, and runs away with an American aviator, Harry Prescott.

When she is captured by the Khedive's men at Port Said and taken to Cairo, the real fun begins, and it is carried on through the second act, in Columbia Theatre last night. He is carried on through the second act, in Paris, to a hilarious finish. A Paristan cabaret gives all the talented members of the company a chance to show their specialties.
